November 16, 2015

Dear Sir or Madam,

Monica Flores was our data architect, web developer and themer for the SOBOM (now SOCCOM) Princeton web project.

Ching Foster was contracted by Princeton University for design and UI of the project.

We then found Monica through the Drupal Hawaii community and relied on her advice and expertise to deliver an implemented version of the site, including the installed Drupal content management system, content types, all views and reports (including member-only pages), as well as a theme template, which Princeton then implemented on their own servers.

Under a tight timeframe and limited resources, Monica took our designs and made them live – and our combined team was able to deliver a product which enabled SOCCOM to be awarded the $20 million – six years of funding – it was seeking from the National Science Foundation.

The SOCCOM team is still currently using the original site design and architecture.

Thanks to Monica for her diligence and willingness to push this project to completion.

Sincerely,
